ENTRY CODE	COLLEGE CODE	JURY REMARKS
65WAT-400	Z124	The line of thought is interesting, however, the narrative needs to be built up, with examples, instances, etc.
65WAT-492	Z129	Jury Comments: 1. The topic needs to be situated within existing knowledge to understand where the author is taking off. 2. The abstract needs to clearly define the ask of the paper, and its scope. 3. Rigorous referencing and citations are missing
65WAT-563	Z133	The core idea is beautiful – the ripple effect, and as a reference, the butterfly effect. If researched correctly, it is very powerful. A small act can lead to giant repercussions, both good and bad [one of the many examples – the discovery of nuclear reactions lead to the bomb as well as clean energy]. The challenge here would be to develop the piece across a time frame large enough to map such repercussions: either through a historical act or through an act imagined into the future.
65WAT-562	Z133	A beautifully conceived piece: it holds the reader's hand to lead them into the future with an imagined balance between human and nature. It's a beginning with a lot of potential. To develop this further, one suggests to imagine how the future may still be tolerant, but without being idealistic. How do specificities of a place lend to varying values of tolerance? Is a common definition of equality across the globe also a tool of oppression? How does a sense of place [geography, climate, and the resultant practices of livelihood] inform the local sense of equanimity?
65WAT-564	Z133	This is a piece anchored on nostalgia, and more specifically the much articulated urban-rural divide within the context of most developing contexts. The silver lining however, is that it does not collapse into despair, but creates a sense of hope. The characters, as people and as places [the garden, and the abandoned grassland] embody certain conditions that enable this hope. Suggest to develop the piece further along the same lines: what are the liminal spaces even in the densest of urban situations that lend themselves to appropriation [in the positive sense]? The act of design here is not creation of specific use, but leaving it open for interpretation. The act of design here is also the imagination of the use herself. As an afterword, the author needs to consider the title as meaning a community, but also the famous tragedy.
65WAT-558	Z133	Beautifully structured narrative, with lively sketches that reveal a genuine engagement with one's surroundings. The piece also uses the "dream sequence" tool very well to foresee the changes we want to bring forth. Suggest developing the writing further using similar tools such as illustrations and the use of fiction, but the content could begin to create engagements with people who become agents of good design – individuals or groups. A reference for a similar narrative structure is a movie called "Waking Life".
65WAT-556	Z133	A very well intentioned and lucid introduction, to what could potentially become a very informative study. The only challenge one sees is that most, if not all, successful participatory design processes have been made possible due a more-or-less homogenous nature of its communities. Most often the reason is that these processes occur in smaller projects with a narrower public stake. The writer should lay focus on these methods employed for truly public projects, and if possible, find examples from the global south.
65WAT-557	Z133	"An Old Woman" may have been a slightly better character to work with, because then the character study would have revealed further challenges that our public spaces lend to its users. Old men may find it easy to sit for hours on a park bench [albeit a comfortable one], while old women will also be asked, "why loiter?". However, there is great potential in this tool of developing a narrative through the eyes of a vulnerable character. Suggest to develop it further by making the character encounter actually [and maybe surprisingly] successfully designed public space.

GRASSROOTS

CO-HOUSING

INTRODUCTION

When there is togetherness and cooperation,
When collaboration gives way to competition,
When the public gets priority over the private,
When the commons are nurtured and
When there is equity.
We begin to build sustainably.

Let us take a close look at the concept of cohousing, in an effort to address the public v/s private dichotomy. Cohousing happens when a community is formed with specific intentions, based on mutual benefit, cooperation and sharing. Architecture can impact the way in which cohousing is played out.

The Laurie Baker Centre for Habitat Studies seeks to get the students of architecture to think innovatively on the myriad possibilities of living as a close-knit community, in an urban setting, by attempting to envision an intentional community in cohousing and to design its organisational and physical structure for the Laurie Baker Trophy 2021-22.

LAURIE BAKER TROPHY | 2021-22

The brief for Laurie Baker Trophy 2020-21 is to envision an intentional community in cohousing and prepare its organisational and physical design. The community shall consist of 40 to 60 families.

All requirements must be fulfilled, as a qualifying criterion.

Each entry is required to have three parts:

- Identification, Documentation and Analysis
- Planning and design
- Impact analysis

Identification of location:

- Choose any one Census city in India, with population between 5,00,000 and 20,00,000 as per 2011 Census.
- Choose a dense residential neighbourhood.
- Identify a site in the neighbourhood with area and other characteristics which are appropriate for the project. (Considering the restrictions owing to COVID-19, it is not essential that it is a real site; but the locality may be real.)
  - This can be for a cohousing project envisaged as a new project on a vacant plot.
  - OR this can be for overlaying the idea and infrastructure for cohousing on an existing residential settlement, which obviously would be more sustainable and replicable.
- Provide justification / rationale for the choice of the neighbourhood and the plot.

Study and documentation:

- Context of the city and the neighbourhood: Demography (particularly in relation to housing), geography, climate, socio-economic and livelihood profile, resource availability (particularly in relation to construction), etc.
- Housing situation: Study the condition of housing in the city in general and the neighbourhood in particular.
  - How are housing communities/groups/associations formed and maintained? How is shared community life happening in various housing communities studied? State and analyse how the neighbourhoods are segregated on the basis of income groups, religion, caste, etc.

THAKUR SCHOOL OF ARCHITECTURE & PLANNING
LAURIE BAKER CENTRE FOR HABITAT STUDIES
GRASSROOTS
NASA

- Are there any examples of shared living or mixed housing (organic or non-organic) or colliding, etc? If yes, attempt a brief documentation. (It is not mandatory that the neighbourhood selected ought to have examples of shared living, etc.)

- Context of the site: Land profile, existing features on the land and immediate surroundings, locational aspects, other relevant information significant to the design and construction of the project.
- Study and documentation may be dependent on secondary data; however, efforts should be made to corroborate the findings based on personal information, telephonic interviews and photographs obtained remotely.

Analysis:

- Analyse the social and demographic profile of the neighbourhood.
- Analyse project related, plot related and resources related information to arrive at concepts and construction specifications.
- Analyse various information and arrive at inferences sufficient to develop a detailed design programme.

Detailed design programme:

- Draw up a detailed design programme for the project for a specific number of families,
- Draw up the composition of a hypothetical community, listing the component groups, brief description of each group including the number of individuals or families in each group.
- Draw up details of spaces and resources that are shared and those which are not shared

Design and construction:

- Describe the key characteristics of the envisaged intentional community; in terms of its objectives, system of self-governance, sharing of spaces, services, tools, etc. and establishing an internal social support system.
- Fulfil the requirements of the design programme.
- Conceptual landscape, water management, waste management, energy management and overall sanitation shall be designed and presented.
- Specify construction materials and techniques with focus on sustainability.

LAURIE BAKER CENTRE FOR HABITAT STUDIES
GRASSROOTS
NASA

- Overall adherence to Laurie Baker's principles or well-argued interpretations of the same.
- Provide justifications, as may be required.

Impact Analysis:

- An analysis of impact on the community.
- An overall analysis of impact on the environment.
- An overall analysis of impact on psychological socio-economic and cultural aspects.

SUBMISSION REQUIREMENTS

SHEETS CONTENT

- All requirements should be fulfilled.
- Drawings, site plans and charts expressing the context, documentation, analysis, programme, design proposal and services.
- Specific measures for handling disaster and pandemic conditions.
- Construction specifications and cost estimation on plinth area rate basis.
- Proposals to contain environmental impact; in material usage and in operation.
- Proposals for water and waste management.
- A write-up on expected socio-economic & ecological impact of the project, not exceeding 500 words.

*Hand drafting / sketching on recycled, unbleached paper of A2 size can be employed as may be preferred by the participants and the option of using computer applications can also be used.

COMPULSORY SHEET USAGE REQUIREMENTS

- A maximum of 8 nos. A2 size Landscape sheets shall be used.
- First seven sheets
  - Site identification, studies, justification, etc. Requirements and design programme. (at least three sheets)

Respected sir,

My team would like to apply for the post of Revit trainers in your institute where we plan to train your students in the software and equip them well for their coming years as a student of Architecture & as a professional as well.

Our team is working in a tremendous BIM environment at AECOM combined with previous experiences with industry leaders such as CannonDesign. We are well-drilled professionals whose knowledge is not only limited to Advanced Revit but also to several other software which constitute the elaborate world of BIM.

We will be offering both Revit Basics & Advanced courses.

As for the curriculum, we will be conducting 8 sessions every batch, with each session having a duration of 2 hrs. The detailed information on what we will be covering in the sessions is enlisted in the attached presentation.

The remuneration we would charge per person which we are expecting for the course is as follows:

Per hour - Rs 800 /hr per

Per session (2 hrs) - Rs 1600 /hr per

Course Total - (2 hrs x 8 Sessions) - Rs 8000* /hr per

*To be multiplied by a number of batches as required. Min. 2 Trainers are required for each session.

Hoping for a fruitful association with your esteemed institution. It will be an honor to serve the college as an alumnus.

I have attached the following documents as you had requested:

1. CV & works of Roshan Jain
2. CV & works of Sumit Maity
3. Presentation on BIM.

Hoping to hear from you soon.
